

245, Section 5, Roosevelt Road,
Wenshan District, Taipei City 116,
Taiwan

April 30, 2020

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to apply for the position of XXX. In this letter I would like to briefly describe my recent work experience and my motivation to pursue a career in the IT industry.

Over the past four years, I have worked at Pouchen Group, a leading footwear manufacturer, as a Product Costing Supervisor at the plants in Dongguan, China, and Ho Chi Minh City, Vietnam. I was responsible for the cooperation with a major French sporting goods company, with the emphasis on outdoor products, in particular such brands as Salomon, Wilson, Mavic, AEC'TERYX. During that period, I have had the opportunity to learn to solve data analytic problems of low to intermediate complexity and manage a team of ten employees.

Four years in manufacturing made me understand that one of the main driving forces of present-day economy is an eternal pursuit of efficiency and automation. I have noticed that although automation techniques are already commonly implemented on the factory floor, there are still many repetitive, everyday tasks in office work that remain to be optimized. Therefore I have decided to learn software development to be able to automate day-to-day tasks and save time and money, both for my clients and for myself.

I have recently graduated from a three-month bootcamp organized by 5xRuby, a Taiwan-based software development company specializing in Ruby on Rails. During the course, I have learned the basics of Ruby, Ruby on Rails, HTML, CSS, and ES6. I hope my skills can make me a valuable asset for your company.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Yours Faithfully,

胡舒涵

Hu Shuhan